Many years ago a simple Galilean peasant was born who lived for, loved and served his fellow men. He brought a great message into their lives. A few left their work to follow Him. He came to save men from their ignorance, their selfishness, and from spiritual death. Because He came to a sin-sick world that was not ready to receive Him it crucified Him. In their blindness men destroyed their own hope. However, they could not destroy His spirit—His message. A great new truth, a new hope had been brought into the world which has remained a light in darkness through the years.

The message of God's love is offered again this Easter time.

Ballads Of The Mountain Featured

The square dances and folk ballads of early America still live in the Cumberland mountains of Tennessee. A group of young people from Pleasant Hill Academy will present a program of dances and songs from the southern highlands at 127th and Southwest No. 7, Highway, Palos Park on the evening of Monday, April 29, 1946 at 8 p. m. under the sponsorship of Community Center Foundation.

Pleasant Hill Academy was established in the mountains of Tennessee by the American Missionary Association in 1884, to provide educational opportunities for the youth of the highlands. It has a student body today of more than two hundred, including elementary and high school, with a big farm on which the young people may learn good methods of farming, dairying, stock raising and forestry. The home economics department helps to prepare and serve meals in the school kitchen, and assists with the harvesting and canning of the school's annual garden supply.

Rev. Walter Mueller, principal of Pleasant Hill Academy, who accompanies the young people, says of their program, "It is not a show; it is an interpretation of the life and culture of early America as it has been preserved in the mountains. The young people love these songs and dances, and want their friends to know about them in a different way than they are presented on the so-called hill-billy programs of the radio." Mr. Mueller will tell something about the origins of this folk music, and will also tell of the unique life and educational advantages of the school.

One of the main purposes of Pleasant Hill Academy has been the encouragement and revival of the culture and handicrafts of the mountain people. The school has a splendid arts and crafts department where wood working, hand carving, and weaving are taught. The folk dances and ballads of the mountains are a regular part of the Pleasant Hill recreation program, and the folk team presents them with great skill and enthusiasm. There is no charge for this program, and members and friends of the community are cordially invited.

Nursing Course At Silver Cross, Now Available

Girls who are about to graduate from high school as well as those who have graduated previously are being urged by Silver Cross Hospital of Joliet to investigate the advantages of professional nursing as a career with a future and the excellent learning and living facilities at the Silver Cross School of Nursing.

According to Miss Mabel Mahlman, director of the school, postwar expansion of hospital and public health facilities now being planned throughout the country will provide unsurpassed opportunities for interesting and lucrative employment to those who prepare now by taking a nursing course.

The Silver Cross School of Nursing building, enlarged by a $200,000 addition completed a year ago, provides exceptionally attractive living quarters and up to date teaching facilities. Silver Cross hospital, with 170 beds and 35 bassinets affords extensive nursing experience to students. In addition, a three month affiliation course in pediatric nursing is given during the senior year at Milwaukee Children's Hospital, Milwaukee, Wis.

It is also pointed out that for those to whom the outlay for advance education presents a problem, the expense involved in taking a three year nursing course at Silver Cross school is far less than the amount required in pursuing training in most other fields of higher education. Board, room and laundry are provided for all students. Tuition fees, which cover cost of uniforms and textbooks, are less for entire three-year course than the tuition charged for a single year in many colleges.

Applications are now being received for the class that will enter August 19, 1946. Full information and application blank may be obtained by writing to Director, School of Nursing, Silver Cross hospital, Joliet, Ill.

WARSAW, CITY OF RUINS . . . Life goes on in a city of complete ruins. Children in Warsaw, Poland, are playing games in front of the ruins of Marien Kircher, the oldest church in the Polish capital. Charred wreckage forms a cross in the background. The population, once over a million, has dwindled to a few thousand of under-nourished and ill-clad population. Warsaw is the "ghost city of Europe." The mystery is why the few remain in Warsaw.

HOOVER DISCUSSES FOOD . . . Herbert Hoover, center, former president of the United States, who is currently making a tour of Europe to study the food problem, is shown following his arrival in Czechoslovakia with Lawrence Steinhardt, left, U. S. ambassador, and President Benes, right, of Czechoslovakia. Hoover has reported an urgent need for food in most countries of Europe if open revolt and starvation is to be averted.

PINING UNDER THE PINES . . . 'Tis said that in the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love, so Jimmy Murray, Johnson City, N. Y., not wanting to be an exception to the rule, whispers sweet nothings to his lady fair, Kathy Callahan. They're all wrapped up in the mysteries of puppy love as they hold a tryst under the pines. Many an older could take a lesson from this young fair couple.

PARIS CELEBRATES AGAIN . . . For the first time since the war Paris burst forth with all its pent up gaiety in a colorful carnival that brought forth its brightest costumes and floats. The holiday spirit penetrated downward into the younger brackets, too, and here we see three children of the many who marched through the streets of Paris in masquerade, the hardships of war a thing of the past.

AIR COMMANDER . . . Lt. Gen. George Stratemeyer, former commander of the U. S. air forces in China, has been appointed commander of the newly formed air defense command. He will be responsible for defense of the United States.

MAY RULE AGAIN . . . As a result of the recent Greece election, King George II, now in exile in England, may be returned. He first reigned in 1922, but fled the country the next year due to an uprising. He was restored to his throne again in 1935 but forced into exile in 1941 when the Germans overran his country.

CONTENDER WORKS OUT . . . Billy Conn, who meets world's champion heavyweight Joe Louis at Yankee stadium on June 19, punches the bag at his camp at Greenwood Lake, New Jersey. A $3,500,000 gate is expected.

EGGS GETTING LARGER . . . This S. C. White Leghorn hen is certainly in a class by herself. Held by owner, Mrs. William Burnham, Albany, N. Y., she looks over her 14-ounce egg, 5 inches long, 9 inches in circumference.

COMPTON HONORED . . . Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston, who was awarded the highest award the war department can bestow on a civilian.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

TWO FRIENDS TALK WITH CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:13-21, 25-31.
MEMORY SELECTION—They said one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the scriptures?—Luke 24:32.

Fellowship with the risen living Lord is the unfailing source of faith and courage. Such certainty is the very essence of our observance of Easter.

We declare with Paul, "Now is Christ risen from the dead" (I Cor. 15:20), and that He is "declared to be the Son of God with power . . . by the resurrection from the dead" (Rom. 1:4). We would join the apostles who "with great power gave . . . witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus" (Acts 4:33).

Come with us as we join two men who had become bewildered, who felt that all their hopes had been crushed.

We join them as they walk wearily along the road from Jerusalem to Emmaus. Suddenly there is Another with the little group. Let us listen to their conversation.

Something is obviously wrong here. These two men are disheartened and discouraged. They are men with . . .

I. Chilled Hearts and Sad Unbelief (vv. 13-26).

Teachers will observe that we are using the full story in Luke 24:13-35.

The two sad men, who had left Jerusalem to go to Emmaus were disciples of our Lord, and they had just been through the crushing experience of seeing Him crucified.

True, there had been some reports on the morning of this third day, that the women had seen Jesus alive (vv. 23, 24). But their hope and faith were at such low ebb that they could not—or did not—believe. Their hearts had been chilled by the dreadful things which had taken place.

Eyes closed by unbelief; faith hindered by doubt and fear; a despondent heart slow to believe God—how very effectively these shut out the blessing of God and of His Word even to the believer. Even deeper is the darkness in which the unbeliever finds himself.

II. Warmed Hearts and Renewed Faith (vv. 27-32).

Although they did not realize it (how slow we are to appreciate our blessings!) until after Jesus was gone (v. 32), their hearts burned within them as soon as He began to expound the Scriptures to them.

What a Bible exposition that was, as Christ Himself opened all that the Scriptures taught concerning Him! Bible teachers have talked about this and it makes one's heart burn just to read their suggestions (see, for example, G. Campbell Morgan on Luke, p. 278).

The way to have a burning heart is to read God's Word, or to have it expounded by a Spirit-filled teacher or preacher.

When the heart has been warmed by the written Word and by fellowship with the living Word, our Lord Himself, the opened eye of renewed faith follows as day follows night. Now they knew the Stranger who was with them—and He was gone.

How did they know Him? We read that they knew Him in the breaking of the bread (v. 32).

Paul declared that same truth when he said, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God: for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned" (I. Cor. 2:14).

III. Quickened Hearts and Glad Testimony (vv. 33-35).

The seven miles (sixty furlongs), (v. 13) which had passed so slowly as they came over were now quickly retraced. They had glorious good news to bring to the disciples at Jerusalem. How swift are the feet of the one who has good tidings to bear (see Rom. 10:15)!

One wonders why so many professed Christians are so slow about carrying His message. Can it be that they do not yet know the risen Christ? For if we know Him, we will realize that "we do not well" to keep silent in a day of good tidings (II Kings 7:9).

Note in verse 34 that before they could speak, the others gave them the good news of the resurrection. It is proper and delightful that believers share spiritual blessings (Rom. 1:11, 12). That's why we come together in God's house.

Brother in the Lord, Christian sister, how long is it since you had a new and stirring experience of the presence of Christ? Not necessarily something spectacular or exciting, but a real deep, stirring spiritual experience.

God is the same. Our need is the same, yes, even deeper and greater. Why should not we seek out our Lord and let Him warm and quicken our hearts. We would then have a revival in our own hearts. Let's ask Him for it this Easter day.

AS YOU probably know, it isn't an easy job to get baseball managers to give out personal interviews concerning the comparative strength of certain stars or certain positions. It so happens that one of the most important sectors in baseball, especially winning baseball, is that spot of the diamond guarded by the shortstop and the second baseman.

While no direct quotes were available we have run across seven managers and scouts quite willing to give out their private opinions.

Here is the way the consensus came out—

- No. 1. Rizzuto and Gordon, Yankees.
- No. 2. Pesky and Doerr, Red Sox.
- No. 3. Reese and Rojek, Dodgers.
- No. 4. Boudreau and Mack, Indians.
- No. 5. Marion and Verban, Cardinals.

This ranking or rating included all-around quality, hitting, fielding and double-play results. There was a close finish between the Rizzuto-Gordon and the Pesky-Doerr combinations. It was generally agreed that the Red Sox pair carried the higher-hitting average, but the defensive play of Rizzuto and Gordon gave the Yankees a slight lead.

In the work they have shown before and what they have turned out this spring, it would be difficult to find a more brilliant pair of infield workmen than Rizzuto and Gordon. Both are all over the lot. And both can get the ball away quicker than you can discard a burning package of paper matches. They keep you dizzy attempting to follow their double-play actions or their work on some slow grounder that has to be handled in split-second time.

Pesky and Doerr are good and they are likely to rate higher on the hitting side. But certainly on defense the Yankees have the edge over any other combination in either league.

The Dodger Ranking

I was surprised to see Pewee Reese and Stan Rojek rated over some of the others. But these votes came from scouts who had talked with National League managers. They figured that Reese would be good enough to give either Marion or Miller a stretch run at shortstop and that Rojek would be a big surprise. Oddly enough they figured that while Marion and Boudreau were two of baseball's best shortstops, their second-base support couldn't match Gordon or Doerr. And Rojek, with all his bright possibilities, is still something of a guess when planted in this able company.

This shortstop-second base combination means a lot to any winning club. Suppose we look back a few years—there were the old Cubs, winner of four championships in five years—and their entry was Tinker and Evers. How about the Athletics from 1910 through 1914 when they also won four pennants? Their answer is Jack Barry and Eddie Collins. Cleveland once had Tuck Turner and Larry Lajoie. One of McGraw's greatest teams had Dave Bancroft and Frank Frisch. They were factors in winning four pennants in a row.

It might be noted that the clubs more favorably mentioned in the two pennant races are strong at this essential fortress. They are the Yankees, the Red Sox and the Cardinals.

Two-Sport Stars

A while ago we attempted a rating of the best baseball-football combinations such as Frank Frisch, Snuffy Stirrweiss, Lou Gehrig, Mathewson, Overall, etc. Ray Farnham from Philadelphia writes that we have left out the star bet of the lot.

"His name is Mickey Cochrane," says Ray. "Cochrane is still remembered as one of the great catchers of all time—one of the best hitters—a winning manager. But few remember that at Boston university in the early twenties, Mickey was also one of the best backs of many seasons. He was a star triple threat—one who could pass, run and kick with any All-America named that season. He was also a magnificent tackler and blocker. Cochrane was also the strongest part of the offense used by the Providence Steam Rollers."

In addition to this baseball-football argument we have already located the best combined tennis and golf player known to sport. His name is Ellsworth Vines. In his day tennis never knew a harder hitter. He was one of the best. Vines is now to be listed among the better pros, good enough to break 70 here and there, and usually in the low 70s.

The tall and willowy Ellsworth can belt the ball a long way, is a first class iron player and a pretty good putter. His long game is good all the way. Vines has always been a fine competitor.

It may be caused by disorder of kidney function that permits poisonous waste to accumulate. For truly many people feel tired, weak and miserable when the kidneys fail to remove excess acids and other waste matter from the blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, rheumatic pain, headaches, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling. Sometimes frequent and scanty urination with smarting and burning is another sign that something is wrong with the kidneys or bladder.

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY THUS FAR: Sherwin feared Jordan might return to the cabin, but he did not want to leave the country until he had evened the score with his cousin, Stenhart. He recalled the way his uncle had died, stabbed by a knife. Stenhart had sworn that he had seen Sherwin wield the knife. Perjury that brought prison—and escape by a tunnel. At the ranch, Stenhart urged Jane to marry him at once, but she rides away before breakfast without answering. Still weak, Stenhart rides after her. He saw Jane get off her horse and go up an old trail. He followed. When Sherwin awoke he explored in the vicinity of the cabin and discovered an old cave and a rope.

CHAPTER VIII

A man bound securely and hidden in that unknown cavern, beyond reach of the sun, beyond the sound of human voices, might taste something of the misery of a prisoner! And, if he stayed there long enough, he would die. It was a scheme so simple and so hideous that it appealed at once to his ferocious passion for revenge. It would be easy, too, if only he could get Stenhart by himself; with all his wily skill in shielding himself at the expense of others, all his bravado, Stenhart was, at heart, a coward. Ah, how well Sherwin knew that! How the shifty eye had cringed away from his cousin's when he took the oath in court and—lied. Lied a young man into prison for life—for what? So that there might be no one to dispute that will, the will that the old uncle meant to change in Sherwin's favor. To secure himself in that he had sworn to a lie.

He stood in the full glory of the morning. The far off heights were shorn of their shadows and melted like peaks of gold into the golden sky. By contrast the nearer hills were darkly wooded, glancing with lights and shadows, and far up an eagle soared. Something new and mighty swept into his soul; he seemed to hear the voices of the wilderness crying to him: "Vengeance is Mine!" For a single instant his very soul was shaken, then he turned and walked to the far edge of the little clearing. There, through a window in the foliage, he glimpsed the lower road, running like a white ribbon far beyond the ravine. As he glanced down at it he saw a man riding slowly across his vista and he gasped for breath. The uplifted moment plunged deep down into the chasm of his hate—it was Stenhart!

He did not question why he came thus. Instinctively he knew that the man was on an errand of betrayal, but his own heart leaped fiercely; he had seen him first, he was alone. Holding the rope upon his arm, he felt for the pistol in his shoulder holster; knew it to be loaded and ready. With a kind of savage joy he turned and began to descend the dangerous path on the ledge of the ravine, and its very danger thrilled him. How easy to thrust a man over here—in a struggle! He glanced down at the boiling water far below and smiled grimly; either way, his weapons were ready to his hand.

He did not walk fast, he took time to order his thoughts; the man should have his chance, a chance he had never given him, to fight for his life. Sherwin scorned to stab in the dark as the other did, to kill with lies! Imprisonment for life—and he was so young then! He thought of the cavern, its gloom, its dripping walls, and he laid a caressing hand on the coil of rope upon his arm. Torn with the evil forces of his passions, sure that revenge was near, he turned the corner of the ledge and saw a figure coming toward him. Not Stenhart so soon! No, a slighter, younger figure, a white face, clear eyes—Jane!

Jane, looking at his hardened face, his grim lips, wavered. Her courage—which had been high—went down in sheer terror of him; he hated her—suddenly she felt it. Then, having come so far, she would not be utterly dismayed. She came on weakly, catching at the trailing limbs of nearby trees.

"I guessed where Mac had taken you. I've come to ask you one question," she faltered, "I—"

She could not go on and he would not help her. He stood there looking at her and she saw only his inexorable eyes. At last she could not endure them; she lifted her shaking hands and hid her face.

"I came to ask you to—" Her voice broke and then rose almost to a cry of pain—"to tell me that it isn't true!"

"To what purpose?" he asked hoarsely. "You don't believe me. Ask Stenhart; I know, you see, that he's with you!"

"With me?" She lifted her flushed face and looked at him, amazed. "What can you mean? I'm alone." Sherwin could not doubt her honesty; she did not know that she was followed.

"He's behind you," he said gravely; "he dismounted on the lower road. I saw him just now."

She gasped, casting a frightened look over her shoulder. "I never thought he could ride so far. He'll—" she shivered—"he'll betray you!"

Sherwin laughed discordantly. "It wouldn't be new; he began that long ago—with a lie!"

She caught at that, trembling. "It was a lie? Please tell me that, tell me the truth—I want to believe it!"

"So you can convince him?" Sherwin mocked her.

"He isn't here, I tell you; I came alone!" the girl cried excitedly. "You came alone? Then come here and I'll show you the horse he rode." Sherwin turned as he spoke, walking back toward that vista through the trees.

The girl, half dazed by his manner, unbelieving that it could be true that Stenhart was with her, followed him. They turned the shoulder of the cliff and saw the one clear vista of the lower road, seen over the cedar that thrust itself out below them.

"There's the horse," said Sherwin, "and there he is! You see? He followed you, he's going back now—he knows where I am."

"Oh!" Jane gave a little cry of horror. "He—oh, I can't think he'll tell the sheriff!"

"Can't you?" Sherwin's tone was bitter. "You led him here."

The girl recoiled at that, not with the horror she had recoiled before, but with a flush of pride. Her blue eyes shone.

Gently, almost reverently, he took her in his arms.

"I did not lead him here," she said coldly, and turned away.

She was in a tumult; how dared he accuse her of treachery? She started rapidly, retracing her steps. "Jane!"

She would not turn; she stumbled on. But he overtook her.

"Speak to me," he said brokenly. "Forgive me—I thought I was strong, but I'm weak; I'm a beggar for a word of kindness. You came here—tell me, Jane, you knew it wasn't true of me?"

She stood still, looking down, pale and shaken. "You wouldn't answer me. Tell me that you're innocent—" she lifted her eyes to his—"tell me and—I'll believe you!"

He looked at her strangely, and he was still iron in his will to kill the perjurer.

"I am innocent of that crime," he said.

She leaned back against the cliff behind her, panting, her face flushed and her lips trembled.

"Do you believe me, Jane?" he asked hoarsely. "Had I been guilty of that—I would never have told you that I loved you."

She looked up and their eyes held each other.

"I believe you, John," she said simply.

For one long moment they looked at each other thus and a strange change swept over the man. He felt it without knowing it, without recognizing this hidden thing that took possession of him; but suddenly the world seemed flooded with light and in it he saw only the face of the girl. Gently, almost reverently, he took her in his arms.

Jim Keller, ready for breakfast, found no one about. He shouted to Ah Ling.

"Get me some coffee! I wonder where in mischief Jane is?" he added to himself, testily. Then his mind went back to yesterday and he remembered her face; she had said little, but he knew her well. "Confound it," he thought soberly, "she's got a fancy for that fellow! My fault, too; I'd no business to have a stranger about, a man without credentials."

He drank his coffee hastily and ate little. Fanny Sewell had spoken the day before of going away. Stenhart, she said, was well. Jim did not mean to let her go, but she was hesitating; he wanted her to marry him but she wanted to work two more years. "Ridiculous idea!" Jim growled; "I need you more than these sick people!" She had not yet appeared and it angered him to feel that perhaps she did not want a tete-a-tete just now. He rose from the table, thrusting his hands into his pockets, and walked to and fro in the hall. He began to be more and more puzzled by his sister's absence.

"She went on horseback—long while ago," Teresa told him.

Jim thought of the rustlers.

"Where's Mac?" He shot the question at Jose, who had come in from the stables with a message.

"Gone down to the corrals, Meister Keller."

"Did you see Miss Jane go?"

"Si, senor."

"You saddled for her, I suppose. Hadn't you sense enough to tell Mac? Jordan's somewhere about!"

"Meister Stenhart go after her."

Jim stared. That Stenhart was able to ride at all surprised him, but it was a relief to have him with Jane. Lately, Jim had felt that the girl was playing fast and loose with his friend. She would never marry Max, he thought. But this news was reassuring; if Jane—a daredevil rider—would slow her pace to suit a half sick man, she must be glad of his company. Jim walked out on the bridge; they might be coming home by now. The sunshine was wonderful, it dazzled him for a moment; then he saw Stenhart coming across the bridge, urging his horse. He was alone! Jim went half way down the slope to meet him.

"Hello, Max," he shouted anxiously, "where's Jane?"

Stenhart made no reply, he swung himself down from the saddle, looking haggard.

"Come into the house," he said thickly; "too many men about out here!"

Jim whitened; he had a strange foreboding. Without a word he turned with Stenhart toward the house, and once he had to steady the man on his feet, he was so exhausted. They entered the dim old hall and Stenhart flung himself into a chair, gasping. Jim stood in front of him with a set face.

"For God's sake, speak out Max!" he exclaimed. "What's up? Where's my sister?"

Stenhart, getting his breath, answered with cold fury.

"She's up the mountainside with Sherwin."

Jim drew a hard breath. He was furious, but he controlled himself, sat down on the edge of his desk and looked attentively at Stenhart. It occurred to him that the man might be in a fever from undue exertion and not responsible.

"Will you kindly explain yourself?" he said gravely; "you're speaking of my sister."

"I'm telling you nothing but the truth," Stenhart replied stubbornly. "She and I had a quarrel this morning. She left me to go out on horseback. I followed—I had it in mind to overtake her, to try to make it up—you understand?" he stopped, biting his lips, and Jim made an impatient gesture of assent.

"Go on!" he exclaimed.

Stenhart did not look at him. He stared at the bright rectangle of the open door and his fingers drummed on the arms of his chair.

"She was a long way ahead, riding fast. I followed; she didn't know it. Presently she turned into a mountain trail and dismounted; I could see her through the trees. I got down off my horse and followed; I thought to overtake her on foot more easily. The trail is difficult. It ascends sharply; I found it hard climbing and she got far ahead. Half way up I heard voices and stood still—I wasn't an intentional eavesdropper." He drew a hard breath. "I saw them—Sherwin had met her!"

Jim stiffened. "You mean that my sister, going out alone, as she often does, chanced to meet this convict?"

Stenhart lifted a gray face; there was no doubt now of the misery in his eyes. "She loves him, Jim!"

Jim struck his open hand on the desk. "That's an intolerable thing for even an old friend to say, Max!"

Max met his eyes steadily. "It's the truth, Jim!" And then he added chokingly: "I know!"

The sheer passion of that cry, its defeat, its bitterness, carried conviction. For an instant Jim, usually so even tempered, stared at him; then he swore softly and seized the telephone receiver.

Stenhart snatched at his arm. "What are you going to do?"

Jim shook him off. "Get the sheriff after him; I know about where Cutler is—Hello! Yes!" he began to talk into the receiver.

Stenhart, who felt really ill, turned and poured a glass of water. He had drained it when Jim finished telephoning.

"Cutler left Manning's two hours ago, headed this way; he'll be here soon. I—Max, what are you going to do?"

Stenhart was at the door; Jim saw that he walked stiffly.

"Come back!" he exclaimed, "you're ill."

But Stenhart was climbing into the saddle again; as he mounted he turned a white face toward Jim.

"I'm going to meet the sheriff; he doesn't get away this time!"

"Max—I say!" Jim wanted to direct this thing himself. Even in his rage he remembered Sherwin saving him that first night; but Stenhart was off at a gallop, swaying in the saddle.

As his rage cooled he thought of Jane; he must get her before the posse arrived. He heard Stenhart's horse gallop across the bridge.

RUSSIA IS LIKE U. S.

WASHINGTON. — Reminiscences of a Reporter—It's been a long time since the sixth Pan-American conference in Havana, 1928; but that conference has certain similarities with what's brewing in New York today. Calvin Coolidge made a special trip to Cuba, the first time in years a President set foot on foreign soil. Charles Evans Hughes, ex-secretary of state, dominated the U. S. delegation. Frank B. Kellogg, his successor as secretary of state, also fretted and fumed in the background.

Reason for the desire to impress the brethren: Worry . . . Worry over American troops on Nicaraguan soil. . . Worry over American troops on Haitian soil. Worry about the right of American troops to intervene in various countries such as Mexico to protect U. S. oil.

Memory Flashes: Charles Evans Hughes, sedate, bewhiskered, impressive, buttonholing Latin delegates. He made a great picture, did a beautiful job of organizing a bloc of pro-U. S. A. nations. . . Cuba, Panama were to us as Poland and Yugoslavia are to Russia today. . . Hughes' objective: To prevent any discussion of intervention. In other words, the U. S. A. reserved the right to land troops on foreign soil without being hauled before the public court of Pan-Americanism. . . Hughes won out. Our interventions in Haiti, Nicaragua, were successfully barred from the agenda. We didn't have to stage a walk-out as the Russians did at New York.

Biggest Test: Whether the U. S. A. would consent to arbitrate disputes with its Latin neighbors. . . Hughes had instructions to duck even this. The state department didn't even want to discuss the matter. It was a tough fight to bar all debate of arbitration, but Hughes won out even on this.

TROOPS IN NICARAGUA

PAN-AMERICAN ARBITRATION CONFERENCE, Washington, 1929—U. S. public opinion, usually ahead of the government, by this time had begun to change. . . There had always been resentment against landing troops in Nicaragua. The Pulitzer plus other liberal newspapers poured a torrent of abuse on the state department. Even conservative papers were skeptical. . . Charles Evans Hughes was raked over the coals for opposing even the discussion of arbitration at Havana. . . Like Russia, we still demanded the veto, but unlike Russia, the American people didn't support their government. They were 'way ahead of it.

RUSSIA AND IRAN

NEW YORK, 1946—Today, Russia, fuming against the United Nations, is in the same boat as the U. S. A. before the Pan-American union. Instead of Nicaragua, it's Iran. . . But there is one essential difference. . . In 20 years, the U. S. A. moved far ahead in international morality—due to the power of public opinion. The American people, its press and pulpit, were continually pushing their government. . . The opposite is true of Russia. The Russian people know little about Iran, little about the UNO conference, have to take what their government gives them. A Stars and Stripes quiz of Red army soldiers showed that most of them thought Churchill was an American. . . We have to make allowances for Russia because in a sense she is a new nation—sensitive and suspicious.

COLUMNIST ICKES

Probably it was pure accident, but Harold Ickes begins his new career as newspaper columnist on the same day he is needed most in his old job as coal administrator. And, good columnist that he is bound to be, probably most people would prefer Ickes at the helm in this coal dispute rather than wielding a pen three times a week.

As a columnist, Ickes should tell the inside story of how he outsmarted John L. Lewis during the last coal strike and made him call it off.

During Lewis' illegal walkout over organizing foremen last fall, Ickes pulled his trump card. The government-owned big inch and little inch pipelines no longer were needed to carry oil to the East coast; so Ickes threatened to convert them to natural gas.

With this trump card, plus the fact that the miners themselves didn't want to strike, Ickes bulldozed Lewis into calling the strike off.

UNRRA MERRY-GO-ROUND

After Mayor LaGuardia was appointed to take Governor Lehman's place, delegates of hungry nations at the Atlantic City UNRRA conference wisecracked: "We asked for 500,000 tons of wheat and you gave us a 'little flower'." . . . Without disparaging the many fine qualities of Fiorello, some felt that food problems would not be solved by an atomic bombshell. . . The LaGuardia appointment was right out of the Missouri mule. The Little Flower is now at work.

Decentralization of Hospitals Promised

The veterans' administration in seeking to further decentralize hospital facilities for veterans is contracting with hospitals throughout the nation for "home town care" for veterans with service-connected disabilities, principally for those needing only "out-patient care."

In this connection Dr. Paul R. Hawley, chief medical director, announced that such service may be obtained in hospitals in Kansas, Michigan, California, New Jersey, Washington, Oregon and North Carolina and the service is being extended as rapidly as contracts may be signed.

A schedule of fees has been approved by VA. When the program is in complete operation, veterans with service-connected disabilities will contact the regular VA channels, as formerly, and then will select a doctor from a list of co-operating physicians if they cannot be cared for in a VA out-patient clinic. The service is free to the veteran and VA pays the doctor through the state medical service agency.

The plan will eliminate long trips by veterans to obtain medical care. The same regulations apply to those receiving similar treatment from their home town physician.

Questions and Answers

Q. Am I, as an officer, entitled to travel pay for my wife from point of my discharge to home while she is on terminal leave? She lived with me two months immediately prior to my discharge.—D. L. P., Pipestone, Minn.

A. Your letter indicates your wife was also an officer. I suggest you write to Dependent Travel Branch, General Accounting Office, Washington, D. C.

Q. When will World War I veterans receive a pension, and at what age? I have been sick ever since I got out of the army, but couldn't get a pension.—J. D. K., East Dubuque, Ill.

A. World War I veterans do not automatically get a pension at any age. They were awarded a bonus. If your illness was service-connected or aggravated by your service, your only hope is to apply for disability at your nearest veterans' administration office.

Q. My husband was a veteran of World War I, serving six weeks at Little Rock, Ark. He was given a medical discharge on account of his heart. He died last year of heart trouble. Would I be entitled to a widow's pension?—Mrs. O. E. P., Pocahontas, Iowa.

A. I am inclined to believe you might be, but you should make your application to the nearest veterans' administration office for their decision.

Q. My husband went to the army on July 2, 1942, and got an honorable discharge on October 7, 1942. I did not receive an allotment for myself and baby while he was gone. Is there any way I can get it now and is my husband eligible for the $20 a week for 52 weeks?—Mrs. L. D. C., Tullahoma, Tenn.

A. Although your husband was in the army less than 90 days, you might try getting back allotment by writing to the Army Central Adjusting office, 4300 Goodfellow Blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo. If your husband received a medical discharge prior to 90 days of service and is unemployed, he is entitled to make application for a job at your nearest U. S. Unemployment Service and receive up to $20 per week until he obtains employment, but not more than 52 weeks.

Q. My son was employed by a firm in St. Paul as personnel manager before he entered service three years ago. He served in the European and Pacific theaters. He returned in January and went to see about his job again. His employer offered him another job at a much lower rate of pay. What can he do and can his company be made to give him his former job back?—Mother, Cloquet, Minn.

A. Under the Selective Service law your son is entitled to his old job or one of similar pay and seniority if he is physically able to fill the job. Suggest he contact his selective service board and they will see that he has legal representation.

Q. My son enlisted in the service the summer of 1942. I did not receive a family allowance until December 1, 1944. I was and still am his dependent mother. I would like to know if I am entitled to and can get family allowance beginning November 1, 1943, or for the year 1944.—A mother, Mathews Co., Va.

A. Family allowances to parents is not compulsory. The question is, was the allowance deducted from your son's pay during that year. If so, you are entitled to it. Write to Army Central Adjustment office, 4300 Goodfellow Blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo.

Do place-names pique your interest? Do you ever wonder how this or that town came by its name? Well, we've unearthed a few of the forgotten stories behind that naming. We'll tell you about the thriving city which didn't exist . . . the four ghosts who walk with a rolling gait . . . the township named after a hymn . . . the town after a mirage . . . odd names, such as the one given a creek because a pony had difficulty in crossing. You'll find these and many others in your current Service Bulletin—read OUR TOWNS—Place Names of Northern Illinois. Of course, the clever sketches are by John McKee.

Your Service Bulletin is a monthly event. This month, along with the feature on Our Towns, the About You and Your House page returns with Rites of Spring and other hints plus a very fine French Fried Shrimp recipe.

Off the Runway

Civil Air Patrol, Squadron 613-3
by 2nd Lt. Erlyne Conel

Mike Watson, former editor of The Harvey Tribune and ex-paratrooper of the 101st Airborne Division has combined his jumping and newspaper experience in an exciting "on the spot" news service. Called "Paranews" the service is centered in Pasadena and will cover an area 200 miles inland along the West Coast.

To get to the news first, Mike Watson and other reporters and photogs will jump from planes. Using special controllable parachutes, they'll be equipped with a "walkie-talkie", a camera and a couple of sandwiches. A low flying plane will pick up the plates from a pick up wire. Walt Disney has designed an insignia for "Paranews."

Eagle Eyeing the Travel Show. The aviation exhibits in the Stevens Hotel were a "let down" because airline companies failed to rev up their exhibition booths with the beauty, romance and excitement of flying. Resort owners are getting increasingly hep to the idea of accommodating the Private Flyer with landing strips. In the thick crowd at the show I spotted a tiny old lady in a purple dress, a green shawl, with her black hat tipped nonchalantly over one eye. She looked so fragile and elderly it was doubtful if she could walk another step, but she was clutching a fistful of flying literature.

Guiding Light: "Oh, where is my wandering pilot tonight?" Answer: "Never fear, he'll find his way home, I put the lamp in the runway."

A new light approach angle indicator makes it possible for a pilot to come in and land without even looking at the runway. It consists of a 100 w. lamp with several lenses, pieces of colored glass and a strong reflector that enables it to be seen five miles away. A Pilot can descend at a constant and safe rate of speed if he rides his plane down the green beam. Check Points: 250 vets in the Chicago area are taking flying under the GI Bill. There are 4 certified schools in this area that vets may contact: Schumacher Flying Service at Harlem Airport, Lewis School of Aeronautics at Lockport, Ravenswood Flying School at Des Plaines and Tufts Edgcombe Flying Service at Palwaukee. Gregory Peck is added to the long list of enthusiastic student pilots in Hollywood. The Greyhound Bus Line has requested CAA permission to use helicopters for feeder service to its large terminals.

Chicago Hammond Airport. From the air last Sunday C-H looked inviting. The wind was whistling, but the smooth field helped make the landing OK. And the moment I "perched" the Cub on the line, a boy tied it down. Mr. Dow the manager was walking into his new flight office all dressed up like an "Esquire" ad, and the entire "port" was buzzin' with healthy activity. Harriet Drabek, the flight office gal, understands the problems and anxieties of students, because she's one herself.

Recent first solos at C-H: April 5th, Harriet Royce; April 8th, Edwin Carlson Jr.; April 10, Thomas Dipper. Private Licenses: April 10th, Carlyle Lindholm in his own N3N plane, April 12, Peter Pederson, Jr. in his own PT19. Rubinkam Airport. The big news in flying has to do with the stork. She flew in with 6 puppies for Snapper, one of the airport mascots. Arnie Holt, a local aviation expert recently bought a PT-23 and is rebuilding it in his own back yard.

Flash! A wing dip to CAA Inspector Clark for clamping down on all stunt flying over congested areas. If you're in a built up neighborhood, report the number of any plane stunt flying or flying under 1000 feet to Inspector Clark at Municipal airport. Remember, if you can see the plane number it is under required height. Accidents such as happened recently are not only unnecessary, they are impossible if CAA rules are followed. That's all for now.

What is your GUESS? on our profits...

SOMETIMES, although an idea is wrong, it does no harm. Like the idea that a square jaw is the sign of will power. That winters aren't as severe as they used to be, or that red hair denotes quick temper.

But there are other wrong ideas, which are definitely harmful to public confidence in and understanding of industry. One such idea is the current "guessing" about profits made by large business organizations.

Many people are apt to grossly exaggerate the money made by business. So Opinion Research Corporation (an independent organization) made a survey to learn just what the public thinks about profits. Compare these guesses and yours with the International Harvester profit figures given below.

Public guess on war profits . . . 30.0%

I H four war year average profit . . . 4.9%

In this survey, the average of the guesses by the public of the wartime profits made by industry was . . . thirty per cent (30%).

But in the four war years of 1942, 1943, 1944, and 1945, the profits of International Harvester Company averaged only . . . 4.9% on sales. Less than one sixth of what the general public "guessed" for all industry.

For this period, the year by year per cent of profits on sales was: 1942—7.34, 1943—5.59, 1944—3.95, 1945—3.93.

Public guess on peace profits 18.0%

I H four pre-war year average profit . . . 7.17%

In the four peace years of 1938, 1939, 1940, and 1941, the profits of International Harvester Company averaged . . . 7.17%. This is well under half of what the public "guessed" for all industry.

Majority think fair profit in normal times is . . . 10%

The survey indicates the public knows that in our economy profits are indispensable. And the majority regard 10% as a fair

Wages and materials consume nearly all of every dollar Harvester takes in from sales. A Government board has recommended and the Company has agreed to pay a general wage increase of 18 cents per hour for Harvester factory employees. The Government has also allowed price increases on raw materials which we purchase in large quantities. Steel has had an average increase of 8.2%.

There has been no general increase in our prices since they were frozen by the Government early in 1942.

So our situation today is that what we BUY costs us 1946 prices. We will be paying average hourly wages 56% above 1941. For what we SELL we get only 1942 prices. This condition cannot long be met out of our present low rate of profit.

Future Prices on I H Products

It is plain that price relief will be needed to meet the increased wage and material costs which we must carry.

We regret this necessity. We prefer to lower prices, when possible, rather than raise them and we know our customers prefer to have us do that. We had hoped to be able to "hold the line," at least.

But we do not see how we can avoid operating at a loss if our prices continue to remain at their present frozen levels. We will NOT "cut corners" on any of our products, because QUALITY IS THE FOUNDATION OF OUR BUSINESS.

Our customers can be certain that we will seek no more than a moderate profit, both because of our policies and because we have approximately 300 competitors fighting us vigorously for your business. Our request for price relief will be no more than is necessary to insure continued service to our customers, continued work for our employees, and a reasonable return for our stockholders.

rate of profit in normal times. Many large businesses, including ourselves, would consider it a banner year if we could reach this figure. Our average profit for the last ten years—four war and six peace—was 6.43%—more than a third less than what the public considers fair.

All these figures show that our profits are not high. As a matter of fact, the entire farm machinery industry is a low profit industry. In 1944, the Federal Trade Commission published a list of 76 industries ranked in order of their ratio of profits to sales. The farm machinery industry was 57th on the list.

What About Current I H Prices?

When the War ended and we planned our peace-time production, we had hoped to be able to serve our farmer customers at the same level which has held since 1942, regardless of war-time increases in costs of wages and materials up to that time. But recent developments have forced a change in our plans.

IN MEMORIAM

FULTON, JAMES—In loving memory of our beloved husband and father who passed away April 21, 1945. Always so true, unselfish and kind. Few in the world his equal can find. A beautiful life that came to an end. He died as he lived, everyone's friend. LOVING WIFE and CHILDREN

A romance, which began when both were in the Navy and stationed in California, was culminated Thursday night, March 7, at her birthplace when Blanche Mary Carr, T3-c, Tinley Park became the bride of Joe Dransfield Brown of Mount Joy, Pa., recently discharged from the Navy Submarine service.

The single ring ceremony by candle light was performed at Trinity Episcopal church, by the rector Rev. Charles V. Young, in the presence of the immediate family. The bride was in uniform and carried a bouquet of red roses, gift of her father who also gave her in marriage.

WAVE Brown is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Carr of Tinley Park. Sons James and Marlin and their parents accompanied the young couple to Greeley for the wedding and to California where the bride expected to receive her discharge from the Navy, which was presented to her April 5, at the U. S. Naval Barracks, (WR) Balboa Park, San Francisco, Cal. after two years of service.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown expect to make their home in Chicago where he hopes to enroll in an engineering school. Mrs. Brown spent two years of her life in Greeley, Colo. living with her grandparents and being nroled at College high school in 1935 and '36.

She returned to Tinley Park for her last two years and graduated from the Thornton Twp. high school, Harvey.

Mrs. Mary Morton had as her luncheon guests at the famous Kungs-holm last Saturday, her devoted friend Mrs. Sue Aldrich and son Bill from Chicago. The lunch was in honor of Bill's return to the United States after serving three years with the Army in the Azores and Labrador. After a delicious Smorgasbord luncheon they were delighted with the beautiful opera LaBoheme.

EUROPE'S LITTLE PEOPLE—1946

Prices High and Goods Scarce,
But Belgium Is Forging AheadBy PAULINE FREDERICK
WNU Foreign Correspondent

BRUSSELS.—It was not a typical Belgian home, but it symbolized Belgium in relation to the rest of Europe. This little country, though it has known the invader more than once, has made an amazing economic recovery and is in a class beyond any of its neighbors in this part of the world.

No, the Van de Vens do not live in an average Belgian home, because greater material advantages than many of their countrymen know have provided them with a modernistic house, in the Hollywood sense, with expanses of glass and chrome, salons, a breakfast room on the second floor, a library, the decor and furnishings bespeaking a trend toward the ultra-smart.

As I sat talking to Madame Van de Ven, I could look across the coffee table with its bowl of narcissi in the center, to the salon with chairs and divan covered in clipped wool, a bowl of scarlet tulips on the table, to the dining room with its full-wall landscape in oils. It was in this setting that Madame Van de Ven talked about living conditions in Belgium as she knew them during the war and now.

"You can get anything you want in Belgium, if you pay for it," she told me. "That was true during the occupation as well as now—although ple that this step had a direct connection with the elections. If you don't deal on the black market and stay within the ration—here are some of the allotments:

As in other European countries, bread and potatoes are an important part of the Belgian diet. Just under a pound of bread a day per person and twenty pounds of potatoes a month are the ration. Three-fourths of a pound of coffee a month per person is the coffee ration and about two pounds of fat which must include margarine, a butter-spread which contains cheese and butter. Oranges are rationed to two and one-fifth pounds a month and dried fruits and raisins less than one-fourth pound. The cheese ration is less than a quarter pound per person per month. Miners, who are so essential to Belgium's economic recovery, are given extra points, of course.

As for clothing, 100 tickets are allowed for a period. A woman's tailored suit would take 80 points, and an ordinary slip would use up 9 points. However, it is possible to obtain lingerie in certain stores without coupons if you pay extra francs, or you can buy clothing on the streets of Brussels.

"But Belgium is doing very well," she asserted.

Madame Van de Ven's husband is an importer of refrigeration and wood products from the United States. They have a 15-year-old daughter, Jacki, and a nine-year-old son, Johnny. A lordly camache poodle, named Jeep, completes the family. Jeep, born on the day of liberation, has brown hair clipped to leave ruffs about his feet and head and wears a German iron cross. Yes, the Van de Vens think Belgium is doing very well.

And that is the impression you get everywhere. One business man predicted to me that if conditions continue to improve, this little country will be back to normal by the end of the year. Already coal production is up to 75 per cent, and steel 60 per cent. The textile mills are getting under way.

But Belgium must have imports—especially from the United States. And in order to buy American goods, she must have dollars. Belgium's greatest resources are labor and coal with which she makes im-every week prices are dropping astonishingly.

"During the war, it took ten times as much money to run my house and take care of my family as before the war," Madame told me. "It is now down to five times as much, and I think when it gets to three times that will be about what is expected to be normal."

"Of course, the prices have been very hard on the poor people. You had to buy things on the black market because they were not available otherwise. You still have to buy on the black market, if you want things," she went on.

For example, butter on the black market is roughly $2 a pound while it has been as high as $3 a pound. The official price is around 60 cents. Real silk hose bring around $8 on the marche noir whereas the official price is about $1. There has been only one shoe ration during and since the war, so that it is almost necessary to buy shoes on the black market. For an ordinary pair of women's shoes, the black market price would be between $35 and $40, whereas if you wanted a pair of stout walking shoes that would last for some time, you probably would have to give the equivalent of $60. Cigarettes command the usual fantastic price that they do in all countries of Europe today. There is a black market street in Brussels where anything may be had from American uniforms to potatoes. And clothing coupons can be bought on the streets.

"The black market has been helping to bring prices down," Madame Van de Ven said, and then went on to explain: "The Belgians are individualists. They must be active—even outside the law. When it was said no goods could be produced, people buying on the black market created such prices that the government was forced to do something to increase the supply so as to bring prices down. Because goods are coming on the market, the price of textiles has come down 60 per cent since New Year's and the government is taking steps to close up places that are selling above the official price."

In the food line, the scarcest item is potatoes, with meat running second. Just before the elections, a new list came out which slightly increased the ration for fat, meat, and coffee and, of course, there was a suspicion on the part of many peo-ported raw materials into goods for sale abroad. She has plenty of goods for internal consumption, because the outbreak of the war found her plentifully stocked, and the Belgians were able to hide much of their supplies from the Germans which they are now putting on the market. But Belgium must have export business.

Before the war, Belgium was a land of low prices and low wages. When the cost of living began to advance 10 times above normal, wages were raised 80 per cent in order to make existence possible. But at that point the government decided that only a vicious spiral of inflation was in progress, so it put a halt to wage advances and started working on price decreases. As a result, Belgians themselves tell you that the price drops in as short a time as two weeks are "astounding."

Cities in Belgium Still Show Bomb Scars

When I awoke, my sleeper was standing in the rain beside the station platform in Brussels. It was seven o'clock and not yet light. The rest of the train on which we had crossed the Rhine at full flood the night before coming from Germany, had moved on to Calais with its England-bound servicemen.

I noticed right away that there was a difference in the station from that of almost any major German city I had entered in the last three months. There were no twisted girders and smashed skylights, no crumpled locomotives standing in the yards.

As I came out onto the street, crowded street-cars (trams, they call them here) were hurrying by with people jumping on and off as best they could, as seems to be the fashion in trolley-boarding all over Europe. There was a bustle of civilian traffic to which I had grown accustomed in Germany.

Pastures Require
Good Legume StandLime and Fertilizer
Essential to Success

Legumes are a "must" in any permanent pasture building program if good yields of high quality forage are to be obtained, according to Dr. R. Dodd of the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station.

"The legumes not only provide the nitrogen for additional grass growth and greatly increase the yield, but they also increase the lime and protein content of pasture herbage," he pointed out.

Legume seedings, however, must first be limed and fertilized if permanent pasture growth is to be assured.

Describing tests made by the Ohio station, Professor Dodd said that in these trials legume seedings had failed regardless of the seeding method unless the soil first was limed and fertilized. In only about one trial in 10 did satisfactory stands result from seedings of Ladino and Louisiana white clover and lespedeza on disked pasture land in the absence of lime and fertilizer.

"Where seedings were made on sod without any soil preparation but with a top dressing of lime and 500 pounds of O-14-7 fertilizer," he declared, "the greatest degree of success was obtained when seedings were made early in the spring and where the grass had been weakened by very close grazing the preceding fall or winter. The percentage of successes was more than double those obtained following seed-bed preparation but without treatment."

"Where treatment and disking were combined, the percentage of successes was again doubled. It is therefore recommended that the land be first limed as needed, then disked, fertilized and seeded."

DDT Use for Hairy

Vetch Recommended

Recent experiments at Oregon, Maryland and Wisconsin experiment stations would indicate that the use of DDT, while causing some injury to honeybees, may offer advantages that will overcome these losses and even prove a blessing to the beekeeping industry.

When hairy vetch was dusted for the hairy vetch weevil, at the rate of 3 per cent DDT dust, 25 pounds per acre, effective control was secured. Bees were in most cases absent from the dusted fields for several days following the dusting. As hairy vetch is of considerable importance to the beekeepers in many regions, and as the weevil would soon kill out the crop, the importance of these tests is of considerable interest and value.

Build a Potting Bench

This potting bench may be built by using a box about 30 by 24 by 30 inches.

The three top pieces of the bench may be made from the pieces of the end which have been removed. The top and sides should be reinforced with wood or metal cleats.

Raising of Buckwheat

For Rutin Extraction

Buckwheat has been discovered to be a much more economical source than tobacco as a source of rutin, a drug used in the prevention of many causes of blindness and heart diseases.

The buckwheat is harvested while still in its green stage. As the plant will not sprout again, it is necessary to reseed if more than one crop is to be secured. It is possible to secure two or three crops.

Artificial Moonlight

Austin, Texas, is believed to be the only city in the world that is illuminated by "artificial moonlight as well as by street lights."

For many years, it has been floodlighted by the soft blue glow of mercury-vapor lamps installed in clusters atop 29 iron towers which are 14 stories in height and located so that their light is shed over eight square miles of the city.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Sweet peas should be staked as soon as seeds break through soil so that plants may cling to stakes as small tendrils form. If allowed to sprawl on the ground the growth of vines will be checked.

To hammer a nail in the wall without cracking the plaster, dip the nail in hot water first.

Do not paint or paper walls immediately after they have been plastered. Let them stand from eight to 10 weeks—even longer in damp weather.

A lemon heated before squeezing will produce a lot more juice than if it is squeezed cold.

Before laying out a vegetable garden choose a spot with a southern exposure and one that is away from trees. Trees rob the soil of moisture and plant food.

To measure a half tablespoonful or teaspoonful of dry ingredients fill spoon, scrape level with a knife and divide lengthwise. To measure a quarter spoonful halve crosswise.

John Deere Sights Were Set High

In Designing New Farm Equipment

ALL during the war, the experimental departments in John Deere factories continued, without interruption, their development of new and improved machines.

Sights were set high ... designers aimed at new and practical ways of making farm life easier, more profitable. And shortly, the farmers of America will see a parade of great equipment that will prove their aim was true ... equipment matched to the 109-year-old John Deere tradition of quality manufacture—more value for the dollar invested.

Revolutionary is the new hydraulic power-control on John Deere tractors. A touch of the hand actuates a rock-shaft for integral equipment or a cylinder on drawn and power-driven machines—lifting, lowering, and maintaining them in any desired working position. It truly introduces the lever-less age in implement design.

Outstanding are new one-man Qwik-Tatch devices for cultivators, bedders, plows, and other integral equipment ... time-savers that mean more hours in the field, less knuckle-scraping in the change-overs—one man does the trick.

There will be a new tractor for the small farm with outstanding new features that put it far ahead of the field.

An important new machine is the John Deere Automatic Hay Baler, destined to cut baling costs to rock bottom. One man, instead of three or four, does the job. It's the only baler of its type that feeds the windrow directly into the baling chamber and ties with wire.

New and improved harvesting machines include a new self-propelled 12-foot combine and many new features on the famous John Deere No. 12-A. Lighter-weight, faster-working corn pickers will shorten and lighten the corn harvesting job. A new, really portable elevator not only handles corn, but baled hay as well. A simple new grain mover that will replace old-style small grain elevators.

Beet growers are enthusiastic about the new John Deere harvesters and loaders already in the field in small quantity. Potato growers will welcome the new double level-bed digger—a new, more practical two-row machine. The new cotton harvester is a major contribution toward cost-reduction in the growing of cotton.

New integral one- and two-bottom plows ... a new two-bottom truss-frame plow ... a new disk plow ... a new land-leveller ... a six-inch hammermill for small power ... a low-cost, front-end manure loader ... a plow-sole fertilizing attachment ... new low-down, rubber-tired grain drills ... an integral field cultivator—these and many other new and improved John Deere machines will be on their way to American farms.

Manpower and materials will be the only limiting factors in production during the coming months, so keep in touch with your John Deere dealer—be ready for the new day in farming with new equipment from the John Deere Full Line.
